Groundbreaking ceremony is held for RS fiber broadband initiative

The RS Fiber Cooperative fiber optic broadband initiative officially broke ground on the project in Sibley County on Wednesday morning, July 8. A groundbreaking ceremony was held along Sibley County Road 8 between County Road 17 and County Road 9 at 9 a.m.

RS Fiber Cooperative General Manager Toby Brummer said, "We couldn't be more excited that the project is underway. It has taken a lot of work, time and effort by many individuals to make it to this point, but all of that work has finally paid off. This is a significant achievement that will benefit the Renville and Sibley county residents in so many ways. It is very satisfying to see fiber optic cable being installed!"

The RS Fiber Cooperative and Hiawatha Broadband

Communications, Inc. (HBC) anticipate offering services with fiber to approximately 1,600 homes and businesses and cover 90 percent of the service area with high-speed wireless services in late 2015. By the end of 2016 the number of homes and businesses that can be served with fiber will climb to 4,200. Upon final completion, the RS Fiber Cooperative will operate a fiber optic network for most of Sibley County and portions of Renville, Nicollet, and McLeod Counties.

Over 6,200 potential customers will be able to use this high-speed fiber optic network, which will provide data speeds that can be over ten times faster than speeds offered by current service providers. Construction will be completed in two phases over the next five to six years with Phase One now underway. The initial network construction phase is projected to cost $15 million.

The original project began in 2012 and was restructured by the joint-powers board as a private cooperative, making it easier to finance and greatly lowering financial risk. As the project was refined, and the engineering and financial models revised, the total project cost was reduced by over 30 percent. The RS Fiber project is funded through issued bonds and commercial loans.

The project is moving forward under the management of Hiawatha Broadband Communications. HBC is overseeing the design, development and construction of the fiber optic network, as well as day-to-day management duties. HBC is an experienced operator of similarly designed, rural fiber optic networks in 17 communities throughout southeastern Minnesota including Red Wing, Wabasha, Lewiston, Lake City, Plainview, Dover, Eyota and Elgin.

HBC's experience in developing rural fiber networks has helped the RS Fiber Broadband initiative gain momentum and successfully reach the groundbreaking stage. HBC's expertise has also helped create the most efficient project possible. Formed in 1997, the Winona, Minnesota-based HBC helps foster economic advancement in communities throughout Minnesota with fiber optic technology for television, Internet and telephone services.

City of Arlington enters into an agreement for a commercial credit card

By Kurt Menk
Editor

The Arlington City Council, during a regular meeting that lasted a little over 30 minutes, voted 4-0 and adopted a resolution to authorize the City of Arlington to enter into an agreement with U.S. Bank for a commercial credit card.

City Council members Michelle Battcher, Jim Heiland, Jennifer Nuesse and Galen Wills all voted in favor of the resolution.

City Council member James Jaszewski had a prior commitment and was unable to attend the meeting.

The City Council, during a regular meeting last October, unanimously approved a credit card policy, according to City Administrator Liza Donabauer.

to contact the general contractor about the matter.

Other Business

The City Council voted 4-0 and approved a motion to approve the annual rate and service agreement from the Sibley County Library System. The rate is $21.30 per hour for nine hours per week.

Donabauer also announced that the MMPA annual summer meeting will be held in Le Sueur at 5:30 p.m. Tuesday, July 28.

The City Council also reviewed a letter written by local resident Lorraine Bliss about the poor road conditions in the Arlington Sportsmen's Park.

A copy of that letter is reprinted on page 4 in this week's edition of the Arlington Enterprise.

Partial Payment

The City Council voted 4-0 and approved a motion to approve a partial payment of $262,658.86 to W.M. Mueller & Sons, Hamburg, in conjunction with the 2015 Utility & Street Improvement Project.

Concerns

Local resident Curt Reetz, who served on the City Council for several years, was in attendance at the meeting and expressed concerns over the sloppiness in conjunction with the 2015 Utility & Street Improvement Project.

Prior to the recent heavy rain, Reetz said a temporary cover was placed over a manhole and water ran into the sanitary sewer.

He also voiced concerns that the construction crews have not kept an eye on the barricades which have been tipped over.

In addition, Reetz believed the project is behind schedule and the City Council should deal with any delays now and not near the completion date.

The City Council, later in the meeting, discussed this concern and informally authorized Donabauer

The City Council, in another matter, adopted a resolution to transfer and close city funds.

Under this resolution, $56,832 will be transferred from the General Fund to the 2008 Equipment Certificate and $19,968 from the Sewer Fund to the 2008 Equipment Certificate to cover debt service payments as budgeted; $147,811 from the General Fund to the Capital Equipment Fund and $3,000 from the Cemetery Fund to the Capital Equipment Fund to fund 2015 projects as budgeted; $17,864 from the Medical Center Lease Revenue to the General Fund which is the city's portion of the joint community education/recreation coordinator position; $87,55 from the Medical Center Lease Revenue to the Capital Equipment Fund to cover a variety of healthy living initiatives; and $28,521.74 from the General Fund to Safe Routes to cover engineering fees which were not reimbursed by the Safe Routes to School grant. This latest action will close that fund.

New stop sign is coming

By Kurt Menk
Editor

Arlington residents are reminded that a new stop sign will soon be erected at the corner of Henderson Road and First Avenue South.

There are currently stop signs at two sides of this intersection. A third stop sign is being added for safety reasons. It will eventually be an all-way stop.

The City Council, last month, made the move after a recommendation from Police Chief Cory Danner and Streets Superintendent Tony Voigt.

The city intends to place a flag on top of the new stop sign to draw attention to it.

Since motorists will not be used to the new stop sign, City Council member Galen Wills also suggested that the police department issue only warnings at that location for the first 60 days.

Grand Opening

The Prairie Line Trail Committee plans to host a grand opening for phase two of the Prairie Line Trail sometime in August.

The trail runs from the Arlington community out to the Arlington Sportsmen's Park.

The trail is open and has already been a popular place for walkers, runners, bikers and rollerbladers.

Other Business

City Administrator Liza Donabauer announced that a special meeting for a budget workshop will be held at 5 p.m. Monday, July 20.

The Arlington City Council will hold its next regular meeting at 6:30 p.m. Monday, July 20.

Planning for long term care

Most older people are independent. But later in life especially in the 80s and 90s, you or someone you know may begin to need help with everyday activities like shopping, cooking, walking, or bathing. For many people, regular or "long-term" care may mean a little help from family and friends or regular visits by a home health aide. For others who are frail or suffering from dementia, long-term care may involve moving to a place where professional care is available 24 hours a day.

The good news is that families have more choices in long-term care than ever before. Today, services can provide the needed help while letting you stay active and connected with family, friends, and neighbors. These services include home health care, adult day care, and transportation services for frail seniors as well as foster care, assisted living and retirement communities, and traditional nursing homes.

Planning Ahead

The key to successful long-term care is planning. You or your family may need to make a decision in a hurry, often after an unexpected emergency like a broken hip. Be prepared by getting information ahead of time. That way, you will know what's available and affordable before there is a crisis. To start:

- If you are having trouble with things like bathing, managing finances, or driving, talk with your doctor and other health care professionals about your need for help.

- If you are helping a family member or friend, talk about the best way to meet his or her needs. If you need help for yourself, talk with your family. For instance, if you are having trouble making your meals, do you want meals delivered by a local program or would you like family and friends to help? Would you let a paid aide in your home? If you don't drive, would you like a friend or bus service to take you to the doctor or other appointments?

- Learn about the types of services and care in your community. Doctors, social workers, and others who see you for regular care may have suggestions.

- Find out how you may or may not be covered by insurance. The Federal Medicare program and private "Medigap" insurance only offer short-term home health and nursing home benefits.

Be aware that figuring out care for the long term isn't easy. Needs may change over time. What worked 6 months ago may no longer apply. Insurance coverage is often very limited and families may have problems paying for services. In addition, rules about programs and benefits change, and it's hard to know from one year to the next what may be available.

A Need For More Care

At some point, support from family, friends, or local meal or transportation programs may not be enough. If you need a lot of help with everyday activities, you may need to move to a place where care is available around-the-clock. There are two types of residential care:

- Assisted living arrangements are available in large apartment or hotel-like buildings or can be set up as "board and care" homes for a small number of people. They offer different levels of care, but often include meals, recreation, security, and help with bathing, dressing, medication, and housekeeping.

- Skilled nursing facilities also known as "nursing homes" provide 24-hour services and supervision. They provide medical care and rehabilitation for residents, who are mostly very frail or suffer from the later stages of dementia. Sometimes, health care providers offer different levels of care at one site. These "continuing care communities" often locate an assisted living facility next to a nursing home so that people can move from one type of care to another if necessary. Several offer programs for couples, trying to meet needs when one spouse is doing well but the other has become disabled.

Finding The Right Place

To find the residential program that's best for you:

- Ask questions. Find out about specific facilities in your area. Doctors, friends and relatives, local hospital discharge planners and social workers, and religious organizations can help. Other types of residential arrangements, like "board and care" homes, do not follow the same Federal, state, or local licensing requirements or regulations as nursing homes. Talk to people in your community or local social service agencies to find out which facilities seem to be well run.

- Call. Contact the places that interest you. Ask basic questions about vacancies, number of residents, costs and method of payment, and participation in Medicare and Medicaid. Also think about what's important to you, such as transportation, meals, housekeeping, activities, special units for Alzheimer's disease, or medication policies.

• Visit. When you find a place that seems right, go talk to the staff, residents, and, if possible, family members of residents. Set up an appointment, but also go unannounced and at different times of the day. See if the staff treats residents with respect and tries to meet the needs of each person. Check if the building is clean and safe. Are residents restrained in any way? Are social activities and exercise programs offered--and enjoyed? Do residents have personal privacy? Is the facility secure for people and their belongings? Eat a meal there to see if you like the food.

• Understand. Once you have made a choice, be sure you understand the facility's contract and financial agreement. It's a good idea to have a lawyer look them over before you sign.

A Smooth Transition

Moving from home to a long-term care facility or nursing home is a big change. It affects the whole family. Some facilities or community groups have a social worker who can help you prepare for the change. Allow some time to adjust after the move has taken place.

Regular visits by family and friends are important. They can be reassuring and comforting. Visits are necessary, too, for keeping an eye on the care that is being given.

If you would like more information on "Planning for Long-Term Care" feel free to contact Gail Gilman-Waldner, Family Life Consultant, M.Ed., C.F.C.S. and Professor Emeritus -- University of Minnesota at waldn001@umn.edu.

Opinions

Republicans have a crowded field of presidential candidates

Our View: Large number is good for democracy, but will scatter votes and support

Years ago, it was a big deal when politicians announced their candidacy to run for president of the United States. This year, in the Republican Party, it is almost a daily occurrence. The field is getting so crowded that the average person almost needs a scorecard to keep track of all the candidates.

The large number of candidates is good for democracy, but not so good for the Republican Party.

Unlike the Democratic Party, there is no clear front runner in the Republican Party. Candidates in this crowded field will need to use additional resources and no doubt beat up on each other during the primaries.

Another fear is that candidates could adopt radical opinions on various issues in an attempt to distinguish themselves from other candidates. This could turn the primaries into a circus.

The Republican Party will also have a debate problem. It will be a challenge to arrange as many as 20 candidates on a single stage for debates which will start in August. The Republican Party will need to consider certain criteria, such as poll numbers and fundraising, to qualify for debates.

In the long run, the large number of candidates will scatter votes and any support for one person that everyone can get behind.

After losing another tooth, eight-year-old Timmy became more curious about the elusive tooth fairy.

Finally putting two and two together, he came right out and asked his mother, "Mom, are you the tooth fairy?"

Assuming he was old enough to hear the truth, she replied, "Yes, I am."

Timmy seemed to take this news quite well. But as he headed for the door, he slowly turned back toward his mother with a curious look on his face and said, "Wait a minute. How do you get into the other kids' houses?"

Eight-year-old Sally brought her report card home from school.

Her grades were good — mostly A's and a couple of B's. However, her teacher had written across the bottom: "Sally is a smart little girl, but she has one fault. She talks too much in school. I have an idea I am going to try, which I think may break her of the habit."

Sally's dad signed her report card, putting a note on the back: "Sally gets it from her mother. Please let me know if your idea works."

At a wedding rehearsal, the minister told the father of the bride, "As you give your daughter's hand to the bridegroom, you should say something nice to him."

The father, a grocery store manager, took the advice. During the wedding ceremony, he placed the bride's hand on his son-in-law's arm and said, "No deposit, no return."

Sam walks into his boss's office. "Sir, I'll be straight with you, I know the economy isn't great, but I have over three companies after me, and I would like to respectfully ask for a raise."

After a few minutes of haggling, the boss finally agrees to a five-percent raise, and Sam happily gets up to leave.

"By the way," asks the boss as Sam is getting up, "which three companies are after you?"

"The electric company, water company, and phone company," Sam replies.

The Smiths were proud of their family tradition. Their ancestors had come to America on the Mayflower. They had included Senators and Wall Street wizards.

They decided to compile a family history, a legacy for their children and grandchildren. They hired a fine author. Only one problem arose - how to handle that great-uncle George, who was executed in the electric chair.

The author assured the family he could handle the story as tactfully as possible and was given the go-ahead to write the book.

The book appeared. It said "Great-uncle George occupied a chair of applied electronics at an important government institution and was attached to his position by the strongest of ties. His death came as a great shock."

Spend money on road in the park

To The Editor,
We recently took a drive to see the new hiking trail, new bridges and road out to the Sportsmen's Park. Very nice. However, the road in the park is very bad shape - full of low spots and very bumpy.

With all the money spent to upgrade the road to the park, couldn't some money be spent on the road in the park?

Thanks for listening.

We need both insiders and outsiders in Congress

By Lee H. Hamilton

Members of Congress get categorized in all sorts of ways. They're liberal or conservative; Republican or Democrat; interested in domestic affairs or specialists in foreign policy.

There's one very important category, though, that I never hear discussed: whether a member wants to be an inside player or an outside player. Yet where members fall on the continuum helps to shape the institution of Congress.

First, I should say that the categories are not hard and fast. Some politicians are insiders part of the time and outsiders at other times. Still, most fall on one side of the line or other, especially as they go on in their careers.

Insiders focus on making the institution work. They tend to give fewer speeches on the floor, issue fewer press releases, and spend less time considering how to play the public relations game or how to raise money. Instead, they put in long, tedious hours on the minutiae of developing legislation, attending hearings, listening to experts, exploring policy options, and working on building consensus. They're dedicated to finding support for a bill or a set of proposals wherever they can, and they appreciate the necessity of bipartisanship.

They're constantly engaged in networking and so tend to be popular within the Congress — they have the respect of their colleagues because other members know these are the people who make the institution move forward. They're the ones who do the necessary work of legislating.

Outsiders pass through the institution of Congress, but many of them are using Congress — and especially the House of Representatives — as a stepping-stone to another office: the Senate, a governorship, the presidency.

On Capitol Hill, these people behave very differently from insiders. They raise money aggressively, put a lot of effort into developing a public persona, and are consumed with public relations. They travel a lot and take every opportunity they can to meet and address conferences and large organizations. They churn out press releases and speak on the floor on every topic they can find something to deliver an opinion about.

They miss votes more frequently than insiders, and often do not attend committee hearings. They tend not to socialize with other members, and so generally are not as popular as insiders. When they do attend a committee hearing, they use it as a platform to help them build a constituency beyond their own district or state. They tend to be more partisan than insiders, because they are seeking to build a political base. They're often impatient with House and Senate traditions, and are impatient with the democratic process.

I remember late one night — actually, it was more like 3:00 or 4:00 in the morning— standing behind the rail of the House talking with a charismatic, charming congressman from the South. He'd been in the House for only a term or two, and was chagrined at the parliamentary tangle we were working our way through that night. "Lee," he said, "how can you stand this place? I'm going to go home and run for governor!" And he did.

I want to be clear that I'm not making a judgment here as to which kind of member is more valuable. I may prefer to spend my time with insiders, but both are needed to make the system work. You have to have members reaching out to the broader public, talking about the big issues and engaging Americans in the issues of the day. And you need people on the inside who are dedicated to resolving those issues by attending to the legislation that will make this possible.

The truth is, Congress wouldn't work if everyone were an outside player. The process is tedious: especially when you're trying to draft a bill, you get into arcane arguments over language; you have to go line by line over the bill and each amendment. Outsiders have little patience for this process, and often don't show up for it.

Yet if everyone were an insider, the country would be deprived of the dialogue, debate, and sheer spectacle that give Americans a sense of stake and participation in the policy-making process.

Walleye stocking: By the numbers

Anglers are never far from a lake where they can catch walleye in Minnesota. Fish stocking keeps it that way.

Stocking walleyes involves taking eggs from waters that have reproducing walleye populations and releasing newly hatched fry or small walleye fingerlings into lakes that don't have reproducing populations.

The Minnesota Department of Natural Resources pays for its stocking effort with fishing license and walleye stamp dollars. This year, the process started April 8 in the Pike River near Tower, used eight egg-take sites and ended April 26 in Fergus Falls.

Curious about walleye stocking? Here's a snapshot, by the numbers.

2015 stocking effort

Eggs taken: 4,655 quarts of eggs, or 582 million eggs, close to the 10-year average.

2015 stocking plan: 286 rearing ponds get 115 million fry and 272 lakes get 296 million fry. The goal for fingerling stocking is about 140,000 pounds.

General walleye stocking stats

Length of a walleye fry: about 1/3-inch.

Length of a walleye fingerling: 4- to 6-inches.

Lakes stocked with walleye (each lake usually every other year): about 1,050, all over the state.

Lakes where, without any stocking, anglers could still catch walleye: 260, mostly in the northern half of the state.

Estimated percentage of walleye harvested that result from natural reproduction: 85 percent, with about half from popular walleye lakes like Lake of the Woods, Leech,

Red and Winnibigoshish.

Cost of an easy way to support walleye stocking: $5, to buy a walleye stamp, sold wherever Minnesota hunting and fishing licenses are sold.

Stocking other fish

The DNR also rears and stocks catfish, muskellunge, lake sturgeon and northern pike using 11 warm-water hatcheries; and stream trout, lake trout and splake in five cold-water hatcheries. To provide youth fishing opportunities in numerous Twin Cities metro area lakes, the agency stocks bluegill, channel catfish, crappie, largemouth bass, northern pike, perch and walleye.

For stocking information about individual lakes, enter the lake name on LakeFinder at the DNR Fish Minnesota page.

Breeding mallard numbers down, other species up from last year

Minnesota's breeding mallard population counts are down from last year while other species saw increases, according to the results of the annual Minnesota Department of Natural Resources spring waterfowl surveys.

This year's mallard breeding population was estimated at 206,000, which is 20 percent below last year's estimate of 257,000 breeding mallards, 17 percent below the recent 10-year average and 10 percent above the long-term average measured since 1968.

The blue-winged teal population is 169,000 this year, 66 percent above the 2014 estimate of 102,000, but the population remains 21 percent below the long-term average of 212,000 blue-winged teal.

The combined populations of other ducks, such as ring-necked ducks, wood ducks, gadwalls, northern shovelers, canvasbacks and redheads was 149,000, which is 29 percent higher than last year and 16 percent below the long-term average.

The estimate of total duck abundance (excluding scaup) was 524,000, similar to last year's estimate of 474,000 ducks.

The estimated number of wetlands was 220,000, down 36 percent from last year, and 13 percent below the long-term average. Wetland numbers can vary greatly based on annual precipitation.

"We generally expect to see lower duck numbers during dry years. We did see lower mallard numbers this year, but blue-winged teal and other duck numbers were improved from last year," said Steve Cordts, DNR waterfowl specialist. "In addition to our counts, the continental waterfowl population estimates will be released by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service later this summer and they provide an indicator of what hunters can expect this fall."

The same waterfowl survey has been conducted each year since 1968 to provide an annual index of breeding duck abundance. The survey covers 40 percent of the state that includes much of the best remaining duck breeding habitat in Minnesota.

A DNR waterfowl biologist and pilot count all waterfowl and wetlands along established survey routes by flying low-level aerial surveys from a fixed-wing plane. The survey is timed to begin in early May to coincide with peak nesting activity of mallards. The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service provides ground crews who also count waterfowl along some of the same survey routes. These data are then used to correct for birds not seen by the aerial crew.

Canada Geese

This year's Canada goose population was estimated at 250,000 geese, which was similar to last year's estimate of 244,000 geese. This doesn't include an additional estimated 17,500 breeding Canada geese in the Twin Cities metropolitan area.

"The number of Canada geese in Minnesota remains high but the population has been very stable for many years. With the early spring this year, we should see a good hatch of goslings as well," Cordts said.

The number of breeding Canada geese in the state is estimated via a helicopter survey of nesting Canada geese in April. The survey, which includes most of the state except for the Twin Cities metropolitan area, counts Canada geese on randomly selected plots located in prairie, transition and forested areas.

The DNR will announce this fall's waterfowl hunting regulations later this summer. Read the Minnesota waterfowl report online.

Connor O'Brien, son of Dan and Pam O'Brien, New Prague, has joined the men's basketball coaching staff at St. John's University, according to an article in The Free Press. He will serve as an assistant to first-year coach Pat McKenzie.

O'Brien's younger brother, Trevor, is a senior at St. John's.

O'Brien, who played four seasons for the Mavericks at Minnesota State University, Mankato, earned a degree in sports management from MSU in 2014 and a master's degree in educational leadership. O'Brien received Academic All Northern Sun Intercollegiate Conference honors and was a Maverick Achievement Award recipient.

During his career at MSU which included 114 starts in 125 games, O'Brien scored 1,216 points and pulled down 813 rebounds. He ranks 24th in career points at MSU and fourth in rebounds.

O'Brien also helped MSU to NCAA tournament appearances in 2011, 2013 and 2014. The Mavericks made it to the Final Four in 2011.

Ruffed grouse counts similar to last year

Minnesota's ruffed grouse spring drumming counts were unchanged this year compared to last year, according to a survey conducted by the Department of Natural Resources.

This follows a significant increase of 34 percent from 2013 to 2014, said Charlotte Roy, DNR grouse project leader. "While it can be tenuous to compare the results of only one year to the next, we suspect the cold, wet spring of 2014 may have hurt grouse production," she said. "We also had comparatively little snow last year for roosting, which may have influenced overwinter survival."

Drumming is a low sound produced by males as they beat their wings rapidly and in increasing frequency to signal the location of their territory. Drumming displays also attract females that are ready to begin nesting.

Compared to last year's survey, 2015 survey results for ruffed grouse showed no statistical change in all regions of the state. In the northeast survey region, which is the core of grouse range in Minnesota, counts were 1.3 drums per stop; in the northwest there were 1.0 drums per stop; in the central hardwoods, 0.7 drums per stop; and in the southeast, 0.4 drums per stop.

Ruffed grouse populations, which tend to rise and fall on a 10-year cycle, are surveyed by counting the number of male ruffed grouse heard drumming on established routes throughout the state's forested regions. This year observers recorded 1.1 drums per stop statewide. The averages during 2013 and 2014 were 0.9 and 1.1, respectively. Counts vary from about 0.6 drums per stop during years of low grouse abundance to about 2.0 during years of high abundance.

Drumming counts are an indicator of the ruffed grouse breeding population. The number of birds present during the fall hunting season also depends upon nesting success and chick survival during the spring and summer. For the past 66 years, DNR biologists have monitored ruffed grouse populations. This year, DNR staff and cooperators from 12 organizations surveyed 126 routes across the state.

Sharp-tailed grouse counts remain steady
Statewide sharp-tailed grouse counts were similar in 2015 compared to 2014 on both the regional and statewide levels. Observers look for male sharp-tails displaying on traditional mating areas, called leks or dancing grounds.

This year's statewide average of 9.8 grouse counted per dancing ground was similar to the long-term average since 1980. The 2009 average of 13.6 was as high as during any year since 1980. During the last 25 years, the sharp-tailed grouse index has been as low as seven birds counted per dancing ground.

The DNR's 2015 grouse survey report, which contains information on ruffed grouse and sharp-tailed grouse, is available online.

FSA Matters

By Cassie Buck
CED
Sibley County FSA

ARCPLC Notification and Enrollment Process

All producers and landowners with base acres on their farm should have received a “Notification of Bases and Yields for ARC/PLC” in the mail for every FSA farm number you have an interest in. You should review the information in the notification and verify that it is correct. Within 30 calendar days of receipt of the notification, a farm operator, owner, or other producer can appeal to FSA in writing. Appeals are limited to errors only in the information contained on the notification and the accuracy of that information with respect to the specific farm.

Producers are now able to enroll their farms for both the 2014 and 2015 crop years. The enrollment period began on June 17, 2015 and will end on September 30, 2015. The purpose of the annual enrollment is to determine who had or has a share in the crop, which will determine who is to receive the farm’s ARC-PLC payment for that respective crop year. Producers will also be completing eligibility forms for both the 2014 & 2015 crop years.

County Committee
Nominations Being

Accepted

The Sibley County Committee is accepting nominations for a three-year term in LAA 2. LAA 2 is composed of New Auburn, Dryden, Arlington, Sibley and Kelso Townships in Sibley County. Larry Podratz currently holds the position and will not be running again.

County committee members are a critical component of the operations of FSA. They help deliver FSA farm programs at the local level. Farmers who serve on county committees help with the decisions necessary to administer the programs in their counties. They work to ensure FSA agricultural programs serve the needs of local producers.

To be eligible to serve on a FSA county committee, a person must participate or cooperate in an agency administered program, be eligible to vote in a county committee election and reside in the local administrative area where they are nominated.

Farmers and ranchers may nominate themselves or others. Organizations representing minorities and women also may nominate candidates. To become a candidate, an eligible individual must sign an FSA-669A nomination form. The form and other information about FSA county committee elections are available at www.fsa.usda.gov/elections.

Nomination forms for the 2015 election must be postmarked or received in the local USDA Service Center by close of business on Aug. 3, 2015.

FSA will mail election ballots to eligible voters beginning Nov. 9, 2015. Ballots will be due back to the local county office either via mail or in person by Dec. 7, 2015. Newly elected committee members and alternates will take office on Jan. 1, 2016.

While FSA county committees do not approve or deny farm ownership or operating loans, they make decisions on disaster and conservation programs, emergency programs, commodity price support loan programs and other agricultural issues. Members serve three-year terms. Nationwide, there are about 7,800 farmers and ranchers serving on FSA county committees. Committees consist of three to 11 members that are elected by eligible producers.
