The fifth district includes the City of Gibbon, City of Winthrop, Alfsborg Township, Cornish Township and Severance Township.

At the state level, the biggest race will be for governor and lieutenant governor on the Republican Party ticket. The five teams are Marty Siefert and Pam Myhra, Kurt Zellers and Dean Simpson, Merrill Anderson and Mark Anderson, Jeff Johnson and Bill Kuisle, and Scott Honour and Karin Housley.

On the Democrat side of the ballot, the biggest race will be for state auditor as incumbent Rebecca Otto and Matt Entenza will square off.

Arlington City Council tables action on 3-person department

By Kurt Menk
Editor

The Arlington City Council, during its regular meeting on Monday night, Aug. 4, unanimously approved a motion to table any action on the formation of a three-person full-time police department. The City Council will address the same issue after a budget meeting which is scheduled for Tuesday, Sept. 2.

City Council members James Jaszewski, Jennifer Nuesse, Curt Reetz, Jason Ruehling and Galen Wills all voted in favor of the motion.

The Arlington Police Department currently has two full-time officers and a few part-time officers. At the present time, however, full-time police officer Bruce Rovinsky is on a medical leave.

The City Council discussed the same issue three years ago, according to City Administrator Liza Donabauer. At that time, the additional cost to go from a two-person to three-person police department was approximately $31,000.

At the present time, the additional cost to go from a two-person to three-person police department could be as high as approximately $43,000, according to Donabauer.

Prior to the motion to table, Mayor Jim Kreft said the City Council could always start the search for a third officer now and have the ability to shut down the process if the financial number did not fit into the budget.

Ruehling was the strongest supporter among the City Council members to speak out in favor of the three-person police department.

New Arlington Police Chief Cory Danner also listed four primary reasons in support of a three-person police department.

First, the move would provide more accountability within the police department. Full-time officers would have additional ownership and pride in their job.

Second, public safety would be enhanced as full-time police officers would be more visible in the community. In addition, there would be greater coverage.

Third, there would be greater consistency in the way full-time officers would handle and follow up on all calls, traffic stops and any other interaction with the public.

Fourth, public interaction and education would be enhanced. With a third full-time officer, there would be a greater chance to potentially have an officer trained in a specialized program. In addition, officers would be more available to give presentations at schools and in the community.

Other Business

In other business, Donabauer reported that the City of Arlington is expected to receive $726,233 in Local Government Aid during 2015. That is an $11,826 increase from 2014 when Arlington received 714,407.

In other action, the City Council unanimously approved a gambling license for the Arlington Area Chamber of Commerce to sell button raffle which will conclude during the Arli-Dazzle festivities on Saturday, Dec. 6.

One hundred one buttons were already sold at the Sibley County Fair last week, according to Arli-Dazzle Chairperson Kim Schneider. That leaves 899 buttons which will be distributed to local businesses and Chamber members.

A planning meeting for the Arli-Dazzle festivities will be held at the Arlington Haus II at 6 p.m. Monday, Aug. 11.

The Arlington City Council will hold its next regular meeting at 6:30 p.m. Monday, Aug. 18.

Lipke wants a bipartisan approach in state House

By Lori Copler
Editor

McLeod County Chronicle

John Lipke is the DFL candidate for District 18B state representative, but his goal is to develop bipartisan cooperation at the State Capitol.

Lipke, of rural Stewart, is a businessman and financial consultant, and also has farmed and been active in Education Minnesota in his role as a bus driver for the former McLeod West School District.

Lipke said he has advocated for all three interests — business, agriculture and education — at the Capitol, developing relationships on both sides of the aisle.

“I believe I can bring something to this district that I believe it’s looking for — bipartisanship,” said Lipke. “I’m someone who knows how to reach across the aisle.”

Lipke has lived most of his life in McLeod County, although his first three years were spent near Buffalo Lake.

His parents moved when he was 3 to Stewart, and he has lived in the Stewart area ever since, with the exception of a few years in Hutchinson after he married his wife, Sandy.

The couple bought a farm between Stewart and Hutchinson, where they raised Arabian horses for many years before Sandy’s death.

Lipke earned his degree in business administration from Gustavus Adolphus College in St. Peter, and also has a history degree.

He’s been involved in financial planning, insurance, taxation and accounting.

Lipke said he has been interested in politics from a young age, and has been involved in one way or another since he was 15 or 16 years old.

“Mom and Dad were active in politics,” said Lipke. “They laid the foundation for me.”

Lipke has worked mainly

John Lipke of rural Stewart is running on the DFL ticket for the District 18B House seat, taking on incumbent Republican Glenn Gruenhagen. He has established a campaign headquarters in Glencoe (above).

behind the scenes in politics, lobbying for business, agriculture, education and other issues.

But he said he always had an interest in holding an office, and decided to seek the District 18B House seat, currently held by state Rep. Glenn Gruenhagen, R-Glencoe, because the DFL needed a candidate.

“What prompted me is that we needed a candidate, and time was running out,” said Lipke, who filed for candidacy on the closing day.

Lipke knows he’ll have a tough race in District 18, a Republican stronghold, but he believes people are ready for a representative who will work both sides of the aisle.

“I want to be a voice for District 18B — for Democrats and Republicans alike,” said Lipke. “We know we need support from Republican and independent voters as well as Democrats — and we do have support from a lot of Republicans. I feel we can win this race. In fact, we have every intention of winning.”

Lipke said he intends to have an open door, and will listen to his constituents.

“I’ll listen to everyone,” said Lipke. “I don’t want to just speak, I want to listen.”

To that end, Lipke took the unusual step of establishing a campaign headquarters in Glencoe, and said a recent open house drew a good number of people.

The headquarters is located at 714 E. 13th St. in Glencoe, and Lipke encourages constituents to stop in and visit. His campaign staff is hoping to establish regular office hours in the near future.

Lipke also said his campaign intends to “have a large presence” at both the McLeod and Sibley county fairs, and encourages constituents to stop and chat.

“I know a lot of people are dissatisfied with their current representation,” Lipke concluded. “I intend to change the way people are represented at the Capitol.”

Primary Election
set for next Tuesday

Our View: Voting is not only a right.
It is also a responsibility

The Sibley County Fair is now over and summer is drawing to a close. People are attending playoff baseball games, thinking about back-to-school shopping and praying for rain. It is also time for the Primary Election which is set for Tuesday, Aug. 12.

The Primary Election gives voters an opportunity to decide which candidates will represent their political party during the General Election in November. In addition, the Primary Election can also reduce the number of candidates in nonpartisan races for the General Election. This will be the case for the County Commissioner races on the east and west ends of Sibley County this year.

Since there are typically only a few races of importance on the ballot for the Primary Election, voter turnout is usually low. However, it is very important that all people go to the polls so the Primary Election is not dominated by a small group of citizens. In addition, to have a good selection of candidates on the ballot for the General Election, voters must turn out and make wise choices during the Primary Election.

Voting is not only a right. It is also a responsibility. That responsibility should start at the Primary Election on Tuesday, Aug. 12.

No text is worth dying for

By Amy Klobuchar
John Hoeven
U.S. Senators

Whether it is sending a text, reading an email, or changing stations on the radio, it only takes a moment of distraction to cause a tragedy. In fact, research shows if a driver takes their eyes off the road for just 5 seconds at 55 mph they will travel the entire length of a football field. When you think about driving that far, that fast, without paying attention, it's not hard to see the potential for disaster.

Unfortunately, drivers are taking that risk and the numbers are staggering. In fact, a recent report by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention found that nearly half of all U.S. high school students admitted to texting or emailing while driving. Every day, nine people die and more than 1,000 are injured due to crashes involving distracted driving. In 2012 alone there was an estimated 421,000 people injured in crashes involving a distracted driver.

But these numbers don't tell the story of the real people who have lost their lives and whose families are still suffering. Take the Logan family from Byron, Minnesota who lost their daughter DeeJ to distracted driving in 2012. In the afternoon on the first day of her senior year, DeeJ was killed when she looked down to send a text and ran into the back of a school bus. She was just 17 years old.

Tragedies like this are occurring in Minnesota, North Dakota and across America. They are a stark reminder that putting a stop to distracted driving is a matter of life and death. It is also a call to action and why we have introduced bipartisan legislation that would bring resources to states taking a stand against distracted driving. The Improving Driver Safety Act would expand access to an existing grant program that provides funds to states to boost enforcement laws and educate the public on the dangers of distracted driving.

Unfortunately, too many states are being prevented from receiving this important funding. In 2013, out of 38 states that applied for grants only seven qualified, leaving more than 50% in available funds unused. This year only one state benefitted from the program and 70% of the funding was left unused. This makes no sense.

Our bill would expand access to these distracted driving grants by adjusting the requirements to ensure more states, including Minnesota and North Dakota, that are taking steps to curb distracted driving aren't prevented from receiving funds. For example, if a state passes a law that bans text messaging and makes it a primary offense that state would be rewarded for moving in the right direction. Without our bill, that state would receive no support at all.

While these steps are important, there is no single law that will end distracted driving. Instead, we need to start changing attitudes and raising awareness. It has been done before – in 1970, fewer than 15% of Americans used seatbelts. Following a comprehensive education campaign by the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration that number is now near an all-time historic high of 84 percent. That same progress can be made with distracted driving.

To be successful, we each need to take responsibility and realize there is no text message worth dying for. We must reaffirm our commitment to paying attention behind the wheel and improving safety on our roads. Together we can help ensure no one will have to face the same tragedy the Logan family has had to endure.

America's poverty: Do something about it

By Glenn Mollette

I've never lived in poverty. However, like most Americans I have known a few tough times. I do know that poverty is not pretty. I've never been around a hungry family that was dancing in joy because of their dire situation. Poverty is hard.

I grew up in Martin County, Kentucky. We were supposed to be the poorest county in the United States in 1964 when President Johnson began his campaign against poverty.

Government assistance came into existence to help the poor not only in our county but also throughout the United States. A few dollars from the government helps if you are down and out. However, living on government handouts for months and even years is a rock bottom life for the poor and our nation. Barely existing is an understatement when you are dependent every day on what you can get from the federal government. Our government, like many Americans, has spent more than it has taken in. Our national debt is headed to 18 trillion dollars. Extra money to hand out to improv-erished Americans is going to decrease. There is no room for federal charity to grow.

Changing the direction of your life involves making big decisions. It could mean moving to a place where there are opportunities. There are paying jobs in America but you may need to go to the area where they are being offered. Staying where you are and dreaming that your ship will arrive is not reality.

Sometimes poverty has resulted from years of bad decisions, addictions and simply mentally zoning out about the realities of life.

Bad things often happen to people putting them into such a tail spin that they hit rock bottom losing their houses, cars and help from family and friends. There are lots of real reasons and stories that people have about their situations

People in poverty are lonely and feel hopeless. In Nashville, Tennessee on any given night there are over 8,000 homeless people bedding down in public places, or homeless shelters. There are also lots of veterans, elderly and young singles with no place to go. A family sleeping in an old car or huddled together on a park bench under a blanket is not beautiful American scenery. This same scenario is played out in most American cities only in different numbers.

Thousands of people storm our borders every day with no clue of how they will financially survive in America. However, America is their dream and their way of trying to reinvent their desperate lives. More poverty unfortunately is coming to America. President Johnson's dream of a great society of handouts to the down and out has maxed out.

This doesn't mean that America cannot be even greater than we are but the government is not going to create it. Our country is made of people. The fiber and soul of America is the spirit, of the American people, who each day says, "I must, I can and I will take control of my life and destiny." And then, do something about it.

Names of 8 priests are released

The names of eight priests accused of sexually abusing children in the New Ulm Archdiocese have been made public, according to the KNUJ Radio website.

Victim's attorney Jeff Anderson released the names of possibly abusive priests that came out during a recent deposition of Father Francis Garvey, who was once a top church official. Anderson said he made those names public in the interest of public safety. All eight priests are now dead, but Anderson said there could be victims who have not come forward.

New Ulm is the only Minnesota Archdiocese that has not released its internal list of credibly accused priests. The priests named by Father Garvey in the deposition include Father David Roney, Father Francis Markey, Father Vincent Fitzgerald, Father William Marks, Father Michael Skoblik, Father John Gleason, Father Douglas Schleisman and Father John Murphy.
