Judge convicts driver on 1 of 3 charges in car-bicycle accident

Crash claimed life of Glencoe woman

By Lori Copler Editor

A driver facing charges in the April 2015 death of Glencoe resident Penny Verdeck in a car-bicycle accident has been convicted of careless driving.

District Judge Timothy Looby found her not guilty on two other charges — felony vehicular homicide and a misdemeanor charge of using a cellphone while driving.

Looby filed his findings on the case last week. The case went to a court trial, which is heard by a judge, rather than a jury, in late Prosecutors had alleged that Emily Givens, 26, of Prior Lake, had been reading two text messages in the seconds before she hit Verdeck on a county road just north of Glencoe on April 26, 2015.

According to court documents, Givens claimed that she was not reading messages when the accident occurred, but had unlocked her

phone to change a Pandora radio

Givens said that she last used the messaging app while parked in her grandmother's driveway in Hutchinson. However, the app automatically opened on the screen when the phone was unlocked.

The judge, in his findings, said that experts for the prosecution noted that when the messaging app opened, the messages were assigned a "read" receipt.

The judge said those experts conceded that "a 'read' receipt does not mean the defendant physically read the messages."

Looby said that the prosecution could not prove beyond a reasonable doubt that Givens was distracted by the text messages.

The judge did note that Givens had at least 17 seconds to see Verdeck on her bike, but may not

County hears request to rezone property west of Glencoe on Hwy. 212

By Lori Copler Editor

The McLeod County Planning Advisory Commission is recommending approval of rezoning request that may lead to the establishment of a used implement dealership next to Midwest Machinery on Highway 212, east of Glencoe.

Jerad Huepenbecker and Kenneth Hartung appeared before the commission Wednesday, Sept. 21, asking for a rezoning of a 10-acre parcel to highway business from agricultural.

If the rezoning is finalized by the County Board, plans are to construct a new building for shop and office use with an outdoor display area for the equipment. The site will share highway access with the existing John Deere dealership.

Neighbors Janet Willand and Vern Lindeman raised concerns about drainage, noting that the area is prone to flooding.

Because of the water issues, Hartung said he has increased a drainage tile to 12 inches from 6 inches from the highway right-of-

"That won't be able to accommodate a 100-year rain, but it definitely helps," said Hartung. "We may need to assess that tile line again."

McLeod County Commissioner Ron Shimanski, who sits on the planning commission, said that the topic before the commission was the rezoning. Any conditions placed on the property concerning

Commissioner candidates talk taxes, trails, recycling at forum

By Lori Copler Editor

Candidates for McLeod County commissioner expressed their views and opinions at a forum sponsored by the Greater Minnesota Republican Women Tuesday, Sept. 20.

Candidates included incumbent Paul Wright and Rob Raiche, running in District 3; incumbent Ron Shimanski, running unopposed in District 1; and, in District 4, Jeff Nies and Rich Pohlmeier, who both filed for candidacy, and write-in candidate Ane Fitzgerald.

The forum started with each candidate having a couple of minutes to introduce themselves:

• Wright — An eight-year incumbent, Wright is a lifelong resident of McLeod County and farms south of Hutchinson. Wright said he became involved in county issues first in 1997 as the county considered a feedlot ordinance, and later was asked to serve on the Solid Waste Advisory Committee, board of adjustment and the fairgrounds committee. He ran for commissioner after the previous commissioner, Grant Knutson, retired.

Wright said his goal is to make McLeod County a place a great place for people to live and raise their families.

• Raiche — A Marine Corps veteran who saw combat in Iraq, Raiche said he and his wife moved to McLeod County for its quality of life and relatively low cost of living. Raiche, a businessman, said he has noticed "a disturbing trend of wasteful spending and an overall lack of true representation of all people in McLeod County." He said that was why he threw his hat in the ring.

• Shimanski - Shimanski also is a lifelong resident of the county, residing on the family farm near Silver Lake, where he maintains an apple orchard. Shimanski said he has been involved in politics for the past 10 years, running for the state legislature after then representative Scott Newman chose to seek another posi-

• Pohlmeier — A resident of Brownton, Pohlmeier said he is a nearly lifelong resident of the county, having moved here with his family as an infant. He grew up on a farm in Hassan Valley, attended Hutchinson High School and is currently self-employed. He served on the Biscay City Council for six years, and has been a sports official for 35 years.

"I've learned how to listen, how to observe, and how to take the incidental things out of the equation when making a decision," said Pohlmeier.

• Fitzgerald — Fitzgerald and her husband purchased the Mabel Brelje farm on the Lake Marion road, northeast of Brownton, where they grow organic crops. A licensed marriage and family therapist, as well as an ordained minister, Fitzgerald said she can bring a unique perspective to helping with workplace issues and facilitating decisions in McLeod County.

• Nies — Nies is the son of current commissioner Sheldon Nies, who will retire at the end of his

A wide variety of topics were brought to the forum, including:

Budget, taxes

Moderator Tony Kielkucki molded two questions regarding the budget and taxes into one: "County government seems to be getting more expensive: what are going to be your priorities, and what is your view on taxes in the county?'

Fitzgerald said she feels a priority has to be roads and infrastructure.

As a farmer, she said good roads "are essential to deliver our products."

Fitzgerald added that it is essential that the county do the best it can to leverage state and federal funds for Raiche said he moved to McLeod County because of the low taxes. But now, he said, it seems the county caters to a few, rather than the majority.

"We need to prioritize on a want vs. need basis," Raiche said.

Wright noted that just that morning, the County Board had approved a preliminary levy increase of 5 percent for 2017, which he said would be dedicated toward investments in the county's employees.

Prior to that, the levy grew just 9 percent over the past 10 years, a rate of less than 1 percent per year.

"I challenge anyone to find a county that does better," said Wright. "I think we're doing pretty well with the level of services we're offering."

Shimanski said priorities should be "based on essential services, such as roads and law enforcement." He said much of the budgets for social services and public health are driven by the state and federal governments.

Shimanski also noted that the 5 percent proposed levy increase was to "try to bring some fairness to our employees, and to be competitive with our neighboring coun-

Nies said he agreed with Fitzgerald that infrastructure was "essential to bring businesses to McLeod County."

Along with looking for opportunities to share jobs among current county employees, Nies said he would like the county to explore the possibility of sharing jobs with neighboring counties.

Pohlmeier said he would like to keep taxes at the current level, and felt that "maintaining roads, bridges and waterways" should be the county's priority.

Wages

The county is currently undergoing market and classification studies.

Raiche said that he doesn't feel that the county can compete with the metro area, but should be in line with counties of similar size.

Wright said the compensation study was long overdue. "We're seeing a a turnover rate that we don't need to see," said Wright. "We can't compete dollar for dollar (with the metro area), we know that, but we need to be somewhat competitive if we're going to retain employ-

Shimanski said that there is a misconception that the market study will result in raises for all county employees.

"There's a perception that there will be a blanket raise across the board, and that's just not true," said Shimanski. 'Some employees are underpaid, and some are paid very well. We're not just going to open the checkbook; that's just not what's going to happen."

Nies said he agreed that competitive wages are essential to keeping employees.

"If people are happy, they aren't going to leave," said Nies. "We can retain our employees instead of being a training ground."

Pohlmeier also agreed that wages need to be competitive with neighboring counties and cities in order to retain employees.

Wheelage tax

A few years ago, the county implemented a wheelage tax of $10 per vehicle for county residents, with proceeds dedicated soley to county road projects.

Raiche, Shimanski and Pohlmeier all feel that a wheelage tax is unfair.

Raiche said it hurts low-income families, and that he has not seen successful results from initial investments, particularly the Tagus Avenue project, which tried a new technology. The county is now fixing that project.

"I voted against it," said Shimanski. "It's a regressive tax." He said that revenues from gas taxes and license fees help fund roads.

Pohlmeier called it a "double tax on anyone who owns a vehicle. I would be happy to rescind that tax."

Wright said he wavered on his vote on the wheelage tax "up to the last day." The tax had already been an option in the metro area, with another option of imposing an additional one-half percent sales tax. Although the wheelage tax brings in less revenue than the sales tax, Wright said he liked it because the revenue could only be used for county projects, and not go to the state or federal govern-

Nies agreed. "All the monies must be spent in McLeod County. It doesn't go to St. Paul."

Trails

Candidates were asked both about the 2012 vote to contribute $500,000 to the Luce Line, and to approve the recently adopted McLeod County Trails Plan.

Shimanski said he was 'quite upset" with the vote to contribute to the Luce Line, saying the Department of Natural Resources had "adequate resources" without help from the county and cities.

"It should have been maintained as a crushed limestone trail," said Shimanski.

Shimanski said he did vote for the trail plan because it provides a long-range framework for the county's trail system.

Pohlmeier said he is not opposed to trails, "but we need to monitor our dollars. Ten years from now, will people still be using them (the trails)?" He also said trails need to be multi-use.

Raiche also said he is not opposed to trails, but they need to be multi-use. He said he feels that from the planning level on down, the trail issue "has been catering to a very small group of people, and I don't think that's fair."

Nies said he does not think he would have voted for the $500,000 contribution to the Luce Line, although he is an avid trail user. However, he added, the trails plan will help leverage grant dollars for trails, a position that Fitzgerald agreed with.

"I'm not a trail user by any means," said Wright, who voted both for the 2012 contribution and the trail plan.

He called the 2012 plan to pave the Luce Line "one of the most collaborative efforts that ever came together in this county." Wright said that not only did the county contribute, but so did the cities of Hutchinson, Silver Lake and Winsted. He said the effort was needed to access some bonding revenue.

Wright said trails were "not a priority, but still a factor in the quality of life in the county, and we need to consider

Recycling

A question submitted by an audience member suggested that more waste is going to the landfill with the new single-sort recycling as compared to the previous five-sort

Wright said that tonnage collected in the recycling program has more than doubled since the implementation of single-sort.

Unfortunately, he added, the contamination rate also has increased, from about 11/2 percent to somewhere around 9 and 10 percent.

Wright said that people are putting items into their recycling bins that do not belong there, including lawn mowers, guns, diapers and cloth-

Nies agreed that residents need to be educated on what can be recycled. "I've seen a lot of different things that should not have been in there," said Nies.

Raiche said that while recycling is a positive habit, he has been disturbed by what he said was a steadily increasing cost to switch to the singlesort system.

"We're spending dollars and nickels are being made," said Raiche. "That makes no sense to me."

The commissioner races will be voted upon at the Nov. 8 general election.

Although it was not proven beyond a reasonable doubt that Givens was reading text messages at the time of the accident, it does not mean she was not negligent, according to Looby's opinion.

"These inferences do not excuse the defendant's driving conduct, which was clearly negligent," the judge wrote. "Rather, they raise reasonable alternatives, and with it reasonable doubt."

As to the criminal vehicular homicide charge, Looby said that question was whether "Ms. Givens' driving conduct that lead to the crash arise to the level of gross negligence."

The judge cited several precedent cases that noted that drivers convicted of criminal vehicular homicide were usually operating in manners that were more negligent than distracted driving, such as driving under the influence of alcohol or drugs, driving in the wrong lane, running a stop sign or stoplight, speeding, or being bent over to retrieve a lost item.

County receives $50,000 grant for foam recycling equipment

The Foam Recycling Coalition has awarded a $50,000 grant to McLeod County, to help it expand its foam polystyrene recycling operation. McLeod County Solid Waste Management will buy a foam polystyrene densifier for the newly retrofitted county-owned material recovery facility (MRF) located in Hutchinson.

The McLeod County MRF, which now accepts singlestream recycling, will sort foam polystyrene products including cups, egg cartons, meat trays, and carry-out containers. The densifier bought with the grant money will compact these foam materials into condensed bricks that the county can easily ship to recycling markets in truckload quantities.

"McLeod County will be a great partner in advancing foam polystyrene recovery in the region," said Lynn Dyer, president of the Foodservice Packaging Institute, which houses the coalition. "McLeod County provides excellent service to the region, and the densifier will enable them to enhance that service and divert a large amount of foam from landfill disposal."

A waste characterization study commissioned by the Minnesota Pollution Control Agency in 2013 showed that foam polystyrene comprises less than 1 percent of waste sent to local landfills. McLeod County Solid Waste management believes that its MRF, which accepts material from municipalities, haulers, businesses, nonprofits, and other recycling facilities, lation of over 550,000, can serve as a resource to recover foam polystyrene currently destined for the landfill.

"No longer being limited to recycling only clean EPS, McLeod County now has an opportunity to save all types of foam polystyrene products and foodservice packaging," said McLeod County Solid Waste Coordinator Sarah Young. "Being able to add this commodity to our list of acceptable items, without excluding product types and its condition upon delivery, will save local landfill space and be another source of revenue to invest back into our recycling and waste programs."

The $50,000 grant is made possible through contributions to the FRC, which focuses exclusively on increased recycling of postconsumer foam polystyrene. Its members include Americas Styrenics; Cascades Canada ULC; CKF Inc.; Chick-fil-A; Commodore; Convermex; Dart Container Corp.; Dolco Packaging, A Tekni-Plex Company; Dyne-A-Pak; Genpak; Hawaii Foam Products; INEOS Styrolution America LLC; NOVA Chemicals Corp.; Foodservice/Food Packaging;

Shell Chemical LP; and TOTAL Petrochemicals & Refining USA. Additional support of the coalition comes from the EPS Industry Alliance. McLeod County is the second polystyrene foam recycling grant recipient of 2016. The FRC awards grants to communities and organizations that need equipment to

Founded in 1933, the Foodservice Packaging Institute (FPI) is the leading authority for the North American foodservice packaging industry. Serving as the voice of the industry to educate and influence stakeholders, FPI provides a legal forum to address the challenges and opportunities facing the foodservice packaging industry. Was justice served in verdict?

Our view: There were no winners in Givens, Verdeck case district court judge handed down his find-Lings last week in the criminal case against Emily Givens, the driver charged in the car-bicycle crash death of Glencoe resident Penny Verdeck last April.

Givens was alleged to have been reading a text message when the accident occurred.

Many have expressed disappointment in the judge's findings. He found Givens not guilty of criminal vehicular homicide and use of a cellphone in a vehicle. She was found guilty on a misdemeanor count of careless driving.

There are those who don't feel justice was served here, and it's hard to believe that a simple charge of careless driving could be found in such a tragic death.

We don't want to second-guess the findings. First, we weren't at the trial where all the evidence was presented. Second, and more importantly, we weren't there when the accident happened. As Penny Verdeck's husband, Ryan, told the Minneapolis Star Tribune: "We thought there was plenty of evidence for a felony, but they raised reasonable doubt that she wasn't reading a text message," Ryan Verdeck said. "I wasn't in the car, so I can't say for sure she was or wasn't. Only she can tell us."

And Givens contended that she had unlocked her phone for the sole reason of changing the station on Pandora radio.

In issuing his findings, the judge said that there was reasonable doubt that Givens was reading text messages at the time of the accident. On the other hand, he wrote, there was none of the usual extenuating circumstances, based on precedent cases, for finding her guilty of criminal vehicular homicide: she wasn't under the influence, she wasn't speeding, she wasn't in the wrong lane, she hadn't run through a stop sign or a stoplight.

But there also was evidence cited that showed that it was a clear, straight, flat stretch of pavement, that the sun was behind the car and not in the driver's eyes, and that the driver had at least 17 seconds to see the bicyclist on the side of the road here.

It's obvious that something went seriously, horribly wrong in that 17 seconds. And the judge has ruled that no one has been able to prove beyond a reasonable doubt just what that some-

Maybe lawmakers need to look at making the definition of what constitutes gross negligence

Maybe cellular devices should be banned from driving compartments in vehicles regardless of what they are being used for: reading texts, checking the weather, changing radio stations.

Regardless of the judge's ruling, the real lesson of this tragedy is simply this: lives can be irrevocably changed in a heartbeat. We need to pay attention to what we're doing, and the potential consequences of those actions on the people around us.

Let's all make it a mission to drive more safely each time we head out on the road. Our friends and neighbors deserve that care.

Hold on to your wallets, taxpayers of Glencoe

To the Editor:

Hold on to your wallets, taxpayers of Glencoe.

Monday night, Sept. 19, the council approved paying Short Elliott Hendrickson (SEH) $71,600 for a pavement management survey and central storm sewer project study. The section of city included in this study includes the area north of Highway 212, east to Hennepin Avenue and west of Pryor Avenue. This study does not include pavement testing, pipe inspections and other important services. You can't expect much for $71,600, but it does include the "evil" Minnesota State Statute 429 assessment draft roll. This is done so the city can charge assessments in this area, known as Project Area 2. Project Area 1 is the

and Baxter Avenue areas. Look at what happened in those areas: we have young families making $200 a month extra house payments and seniors just surviving.

The city has petitioned the Buffalo Creek Watershed to be the lead agency for this study. The watershed would assist us with flood control, storm water management, drainage and finding funding sources by determining benefits not only for the city, but also for the northern properties outside the city. It has a better record of solving water problems than we do. Doing this study before the watershed does it is like putting the cart in front of the horse.

We can eliminate Minnesota State Statute 429 like some other towns have done. We have to control spending on pork barrel projects. We must insist that departments cut 5 percent off their budgets. The general fund could get cut more because it is a bloated animal that is self-serv-

On Wednesday, Sept. 28, at 4 p.m., the council will have two hit people explaining the huge benefits of Statute 429. I say bah, humbug, to this plan. The meeting is held at the city hall, west room, first floor. Anybody interested in city finances and salvaging your wallet should attend. You can't talk at the meeting, but you can clear your throat.

As always, talk to the mayor or your council person. If you don't agree; remember, the city elections are just around the corner.

The McLeod

County Chronicle

Where's the proof that paved trails are beneficial? To the Editor:

Last April, proof was requested for the claims within the McLeod Trails Plan about the benefits of paved bike trails. To date, no response has yet been provided by either the city of Hutchinson or McLeod County.

After creating 53 miles of trails within Hutchinson, and an additional 20 paved Luce Line miles, paying artists to display their work along the trails, $100,000 in unnecessary signs to show bike riders where to ride, and obtaining a bike-friendly award for the city of Hutchinson, exactly what are the benefits realized? Has even one company or one new employee moved here because of these "investments?" Who? If paved trails are such an economic engine, perhaps Citizens Bank could step up to make its own "investment."

Hutchinson City Councilor Chad Czmowski has repeatedly been asked if his Outdoor Motion Bike Shop in downtown Hutchinson is growing. Can Chad please respond to this critical question? The silence is deafening. Frankly, if Chad's bicycle business, in the heart of Hutchinson, isn't booming by now, what businesses exactly are supposed to grow from all of the trail spending that Chad voted for?

Claims of improved health have been made for more paved trails. After considering the above trail "investments," there have been no reports published on the improved health of Hutchinson residents from the increased exercise predicted by using these trails. Isn't there some measurable level of improved health since the trail-building era began or as compared to other areas of McLeod County without paved trails? Is there really no proof at all to justify these health claims after 10

Lastly, since Bill Arndt promises that county trail maintenance costs are "overblown" and "minor;" how about Hutchinson makes a 20-year commitment to help pay for them?

In the meantime, please provide some proof to these claims.

Importance of equipment safety

Source: Karen Johnson, Extension educator, McLeod and Meeker counties.

Last week, Lt. Gov. Tina Smith declared the week of Sept. 18 to be "Farm Safety and Health Week" in Minnesota. This declaration is designed to bring awareness to the rise in injuries and deaths in the agricultural industry. With many farmers burning the candle at both ends in the field, now is the time to acknowledge the necessary steps to stay safe this harvest

According to the National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health (NIOSH), Agriculture continues to rank amongst the most hazardous industries. Approximately 231 farmers and farm workers died from work-related injuries in 2013, resulting in a fatality rate of 22.9 deaths per 100,000 workers. The leading cause of death for farmers and farm workers was tractor overturns. Another reason why farm safety needs to be practiced every day is to prevent serious or fatal injuries on our farms.

Below are several suggestions for ways to stay safe around equipment this harvest season.

- Before operating, fully understand the equipment's capabilities and hazard poten-
- Use all modern safety features - such as rollover protection structures (ROPS), personal protective equipment (PPE), and seat belts.

Farm Notes

By Karen Johnson

- One Seat = One Person - Not only do extra riders distract the operator, there is no safe place in the majority of farm equipment for an additional person.
- Understand all laws of center of gravity and centrifugal force to prevent rollovers.
- Follow all manufacturers' recommendations for pulling equipment with the hitch and/or using the hydraulic lifts on the equipment including proper bucket position and hitch points.
- Use handholds and care when getting on and off equipment to avoid slips and
- Ensure the equipment is properly maintained and

In conclusion, by utilizing these suggestions on an everyday basis, you can provide a safe and healthy workplace for yourself and your workers. We all need to keep farm safety in mind to ensure that a severe or fatal injury never occurs on our farms.

Senators confirm USDA funding for Brownton

U.S. Sens. Amy Klobuchar and Al Franken, along with U.S. Rep. Collin Peterson, announced last week that the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) has awarded the city of Brownton a loan of $5.309 million and a grant of $724,000 for water, sewer and storm systems improvements.

"Investing in our water and waste infrastructure is a down payment on the long-term well-being of our communities," Klobuchar said. "This investment will benefit the people and businesses of Brownton."

"Upgrading our rural infrastructure strengthens our economy and improves public health," Franken said. "And this year, during my Rural Infrastructure Listening Tour of Minnesota, I've heard from many rural communities about the infrastructure improvements they need. I'm pleased that Brownton will receive this new support to strengthen their water, sewer, and storm systems."

"This funding will help Brownton make important infrastructure improvements," Peterson said. "This will ensure the city's residents continued access to safe drinking water."

This investment is made through USDA Rural Development's Water and Waste Disposal Loan and Grant Program, which provides assistance and financing to develop drinking water and waste disposal systems for communities with 10,000 or fewer residents.

GSL PTO organizes drive for food shelf

The Glencoe-Silver Lake (GSL) Elementary PTO (Parent Teacher Organization) felt a need to reach out and help the local food shelf. This past summer the McLeod Emergency Food Shelf had to dip into its reserve funds to meet the needs. GSL does an annual food collection every November. The PTO felt that having a back-to-school collection would be a great way to help the community and join in as a school to do something positive as a group. Each child was asked to bring in one item to donate. The PTO was pleasantly surprised by the amount that came in. On Friday, Sept. 16, Principal Joy Freitag, chaperoned some of the elementary students as they dropped off the collection at the food shelf. GSL elementary students collected 667 pounds of food, which makes 513 meals. The food shelf was extremely grateful for the collection. The PTO looks forward to the annual collection, which will be in November and is district wide. Good news: there are no big rain threats to worry about

It's certainly been awhile, but I don't see any organized rain chances moving through the area, so this is excellent news for allowing areas hardest hit lately to dry out. The only chance of sprinkles would have been early week Monday and Tuesday, associated with lingering clouds from the low-pressure area that moved away from the area over the weekend. The low pressure area will actually stall out to our east, which should set the stage for a blocking type pattern, keeping us high and dry and mostly sunny.

Highs for this time of year should be in the mid to upper 60s, and it's looking like we'll see that plus a couple degrees as the weekend gets going. Lows, unfortunately, will linger in the 40s and 50s, so there's no frost threat yet as we wait for the mosquito end-game. In terms of frost dates, since we won't see it this week we'll officially be behind average as we typically see our first frost sometime this week.

Long-range models are showing a cold surge next week, but they've been poor at forecasting five or more days out, so I'm not buying into it just yet.

Have a great week, everyone; get out and enjoy the beautiful weather: we deserve it!

extremes?

Answer to last week's question (What might we have to worry about weatherwise if we continue seeing large amounts of precipitation continuing this winter with slightly warmer temperatures or, on the flip side, slightly colder temperatures?): A warmer-than-average winter may bring with it more storms and mixed precipitation. It might mean more snow, but also more rain or freezing rain. I'm hoping for a drier-than-average winter because if we see too much snow, spring floods may be a concern after all this rain. A colder winter would most likely bring less snow and remind us winter can be nasty (especially with the easy winters we've had recently).

Remember: I make the forecast, not the weather! (But I'll take credit for it this week!)

Adam Thom serving aboard U.S. Navy destroyer

A 2010 Glencoe-Silver Lakes High School graduate and Glencoe native is serving in the U.S. Navy aboard the guided-missile destroyer, USS Michael Murphy.

Lt. j.g. Adam Thom is a surface warfare officer aboard the forward-deployed Arleigh Burke-class guided-missile destroyer operating out of Joint Base Pearl Harbor-Hickam, Hawaii.

A Navy surface warfare officer is responsible for ship navigation and warfare areas and preparations for tactical areas of deployments.

"I enjoy the people and the division that I am responsible for," said Thom. "We put in long hard hours. We get to enjoy quality time here. I can understand where people are from and what interests them. It helps alleviate many stresses that come with the job. The namesake of the ship is on our minds during our daily activities and it inspires us to work hard and make ourselves proud of our work." USS Michael Murphy, measures approximately 500 feet and is powered by four gas turbines that allow the destroyer to achieve more than 30 mph in open seas. According to Navy officials, destroyers are tactical multi-mission surface combatants capable of conducting anti-air warfare, anti-submarine warfare and anti-surface warfare, as well as humanitarian assistance. Fast, maneuverable, and technically advanced, destroyers provide the required war fighting expertise and operational flexibility to execute any tasks overseas.

"Our Naval Surface Group Middle Pacific guided-missile destroyers are poised, trained, equipped and ready to deploy forward and support the Fleet," said Rear Adm. John Fuller, commander, Navy Region Hawaii and Naval Surface Group Middle Pacific. "Working with friends and allies, our MIDPAC sailors provide sea control, advance maritime security, enhance regional stability, and foster continued prosperity in the Indo-Asia-Pacific region."

Approximately 30 officers and 300 enlisted men and women make up the ship's company. Their jobs are highly specialized and keep each part of the cruiser running smoothly, according to Navy officials. The jobs range from maintaining engines and handling weaponry to washing dishes and preparing meals.

"Being stationed in Hawaii is pretty great; you can go to multiple beaches," said Thom. "You get to call paradise home for a little while. You can go paddle boarding or surfing on your days off."

Challenging living conditions build strong fellowship among the crew, Navy officials explained. The crew is highly motivated, and quickly adapt to changing conditions. It is a busy life of specialized work, watches, and drills.

"I feel a sense of pride in my job," said Thom. "Serving in the military has been a family tradition that I have kept going. I feel it is my duty to serve my country."

He also was a member of the Plato Fire Department for 20 years.

Although not a sports fan initially, he became one by supporting his children in their activities. He could be quite vocal watching a game on television with his wife. His pride and joy were his grandchildren and he played whatever game they wanted him to play, including Uno, croquet, playing at the park, or pitching baseballs to them. All his grandkids were "Sunshine" to him. He loved to listen to them talk about their activities and he kidded around with them like only a Grandpa can. MNSPECT gets delegation agreement, honors for efforts in ISO ratings work

MNSPECT was successful in its bid for the municipal delegation agreement in Au-

"Now MNSPECT building inspectors have the authority granted by the state of Minnesota to provide plan review and inspections of all public buildings and state-licensed facilities (i.e., schools, jails, hospitals, nursing homes, etc). The benefit goes to MNSPECT clientele," said Kandis Hanson, MNSPECT relationship manager. Under the delegation agreement, all permit revenue that would otherwise go to the state stays with the client municipality. The net result is significant revenue to those jurisdictions that MNSPECT serves.

September — ISO scores are the best in the state. The fire department(s) that serve area communities are rated each three to five years for their fire suppression ability. The evaluation, performed by the Insurance Services Offices, Inc., (ISO), includes fire and building inspection departments and the resulting data assists insurance companies in establishing appropriate risk multipliers for premium calculations. The score calculated for each fire department is applied to all new construction within a community. The criteria for generating the Building Code Effectiveness Rating includes training, certification, experience, and qualifications of the building official and code enforcement personnel; plan review and inspection staffing levels; plan review details; natural hazard mitigation; building code adoption and amendments. MNSPECT is pleased to announce its residential and commercial scores are Class

3/3, respectively. According to Nola Lebrecht, senior BCEGS field representative, "Class 3/3 is the best result ever given in Minnesota (one being best.) There have only been a handful in the 10 years I've worked in Minnesota."

Once again, MNSPECT clients can potentially benefit through reduced insurance premiums. BCEGS info can be found at the following link: https://www.isomitiga tion.com/bcegs/iso-s-build ing-code-effectiveness-grad ing-schedule-bcegs.html.

MNSPECT, LLC, is a contract building inspections firm serving the cities, townships and counties within and beyond the Twin Cities metro area. MNSPECT has provided designated building official, supplemental and backup building safety service for Minnesota cities since 1987.
