The 2019 Street & Utility Improvement Project will include drainage improvements along Clinton and Baker Streets. The project is estimated to cost $2.3 million.

Board approves DAV donated van

By Amy Newsom Correspondent

The Sibley County Commissioners, during their regular meeting on Tuesday morning, Nov. 13, accepted the donation of a van to be used to transport Sibley County veterans to medical appointments.

Veterans Services Officer Lisa Klenk reported that the Minneapolis Veterans Administration Healthcare System will take on all responsibility for the van including liability for the vehicle and the drivers. The County Board was required to pass a resolution to park the vehicle on the county property and allow drivers to park their personal vehicles on county property when driving the van.

Klenk reported that the van was needed because Trailblazer will stop transporting veterans in January of 2019. Klenk said she was looking at having six drivers, three coming over from Trailblazer and three additional. She also requested to purchase an additional van at a cost of $27,000, but will need to come back before the County Board with a written quote for the van.

County Commissioner Jim Swanson asked what type of training was required for driving. Klenk said the VA requires no special training only requiring a physical. Klenk hopes to have the van in a couple of months.

Board approves resolution for CSAH fund extension

By Amy Newsom Correspondent

Sibley County Public Works Director Tim Becker, at a meeting in Gaylord on Tuesday morning, Nov. 13, requested that the County Board pass a resolution to extend the municipal state aid construction fund allotment until 2020.

Becker said if the county has balances over two years old they either have to request the general fund to be split among all of the counties.

Becker reported that they have to ask for an extension because Public Works has two large projects planned for 2020 which will require the municipal CSAH funds; a bridge replacement by Subway in Arlington on CSAH 17 for $900,000, and CSAH 32 reconstruction by the dairy in Winthrop for $600,000. Woman contends her dog, 'Indy,' is not dangerous

By John Mueller McLeod County Chronicle Editor

Sarah Mallory is fighting the city for what she says is the right to keep her dog.

She's concerned a panel of council members might recommend that the full city council declare her dog, "Indy," a potentially dangerous dog under the terms of a seldom-used city ordinance.

That designation means if Mallory is to keep Indy, she must obtain a $50,000 surety bond to cover medical expenses should "Indy" bite anyone else.

But Mallory argues the designation will trigger her homeowner's insurance company to drop her coverage if she keeps a dangerous dog. The label stays with the dog, even if she gives him to another person in a different city. And more to the point, she contends Indy is not dan-

Indy is a mixed-breed dog she adopted in 2013. It weighs about 55 pounds and is about 31 inches tall at his head.

Mallory also takes issue with the way the Glencoe Police Department initially investigated the proposal and how the city handled the hearing.

A hearing was held Sept. 19. Witnesses who observed the July 5 bite recalled what they saw. The hearing panel included councilors Milan Alexander and Gary Ziemer and Al Gruenhagen, a citizen representative. They reviewed the accounts of the July 5 incident as recalled by witnesses and the police report. Mallory presented a vet technician with 20 years of experience who Mallory said does not believe Indy is a dangerous dog.

Mallory claims the hearing was unfair in that City Attorney Kenneth Janssen ran the hearing while presenting evidence supporting the declaration her dog is dangerous and running the meeting.

City Administrator Mark Larson said the meeting should be run in that fashion. The city has only held one other similar hearing where a dog is deemed potentially dangerous.

2nd Hearing

With her complaints in mind, the city council granted Mallory a second hearing to make her case at the Nov. 5 council meeting. The date of the second hearing has not been formally announced when The Chronicle went to

Mallory suggested to the city council at its Nov. 5 meeting the panel didn't give her a fair hearing. She said the council member who was supposed to run the hearing was absent and so the city attorney ran the hearing and presented evidence against Mallory's dog. Mallory contends the city attorney also prohibited her from offering evidence from a person trained in animal behavior that Indy is not a dangerous

Mayor Randy Wilson selected new council members to serve on a second review panel. He also promised to personally attend the review hearing. Wilson made no promises on how councilors would vote and noted the safety of a child is more important than a dog.

According to a letter from City Attorney Kenneth Janssen to City Administrator Mark Larson dated Oct. 31, the issue dates back to July when Indy bit a boy living on the 2000 block of East 15th Street, not far from Mallory's house, on the arm July 2.

Three days later, July 5, the dog bit the boy again, this time biting him on the face and breaking his skin in three

Love Where You

According to Mallory, Indy bit the boy July 2 when the boy entered her house unannounced and without approval. She was in a room downstairs. Mallory said the dog did not break the boy's skin and the dog retreated when called. Police responded to a report of the dog bite.

The July 5 incident occurred when the boy came to Mallory's house, this time with Mallory's approval. The bite occurred when the boy hugged Indy around the neck while the dog was sitting by Mallory's feet. The dog was wearing a shock collar with 34-inch metal prongs. The boy hugged the dog around the neck. She contends the shock collar's prongs were pushed into the dog's neck and the dog having no escape route, Indy bit the child in self-defense.

Mallory and her boyfriend, Brian Lewis, told the city council at its Nov. 5 meeting they covered the boy's medical expenses from the bites to his face. They paid for bandages applied to the boy's face and a follow-up visit.

Mallory also takes issue with the police report. She contends Glencoe police did not audio record the initial interview with the boy the first time he was bitten and that the boy's story changed between his initial conversation with a police officer the first week of July and the hearing. The boy's mother, who attended the Nov. 5 city council meeting, declined comment on the matter. Glencoe Police Chief Jim Raiter declined comment on Mallory's assertions, citing the ongoing process. City attorneys Janssen and Mark Ostlund did not return calls seeking comment.

There are at least 10,000 school bus trips in Minnesota every day

Our View: Motorists urged to watch out for children and school buses

School buses are the safest form of transportation for children during at least 10,000 trips daily in Minnesota. Kids are eight times safer riding in a bus to school than any other vehicles, according to the Minnesota Office of Traffic Safety.

Despite these safe conditions, there were 3,451 school bus crashes in Minnesota that resulted in seven deaths from 2013 to 2017. In Minnesota and some surrounding states, there also have been several school bus accidents and some deaths in

During the school year, it's always a good time for local and area motorists to be reminded of school bus safety tips provided by the Minnesota Office of Traffic Safety.

Motorists must stop at least 20 feet from a school bus that is displaying red flashing lights and/or its stop arm is extended when approaching from the rear and from the opposite direction on undivided roads.

Red flashing lights on buses indicates students are either entering or exiting the bus.

Motorists are not required to stop for a bus on the opposite side of a separated roadway (median, etc., but they should remain alert for children.

Altering a route or schedule to avoid a bus is one way motorists can help improve safety, and in doing so, motorists will not find themselves behind a bus and, as a result, potentially not put children at risk.

Motorists should watch for school crossing patrols and pedestrians. Motorists should also reduce speeds in and around school

In addition, motorists should watch and stop for pedestrians. The law applies to all street corners for both marked and unmarked crosswaks.

Finally, most motorists do not realize it, but more children are killed outside of a school bus than they are as bus occupants. Motorists must anticipate children in a school bus "danger zone" which is the area around a bus where most injuries and deaths occur.

The Coin of the Realm

Debate in Congress has always been contentious. The levels of vitriol may seem especially acute these days, but confrontation is not new. I can remember times on Capitol Hill when "debate" was actually more of a screaming match than a civil discussion.

Back then, we had a colleague who invariably stepped forward at these times to remind each side that if we wanted to get anything done rather than just shout at each other for the cameras — we had to have a measure of trust in one another. We used to call this his "Trust is the coin of the realm speech." And though we joked about it, we appreciated it. Because he was right.

Representative government depends on trust. It depends on trust among policy-makers in Congress, even when they don't agree with one another. It depends on popular trust in the people who make decisions on Capitol Hill and in the White House. It depends on trust in those who are charged with implementing those laws. And it requires trust in the institutions in which those decisions are produced and implemented.

We might have joked about my long-ago colleague's speech, but trust really is the coin of the realm. It is a bedrock requirement of democratic governance. If there's nothing but cynicism, deep suspicion, and lack of confidence in the system, it cannot work.

To understand how interwoven trust must be within the system, think about it from the point of view of ordinary citizens. We have to believe that our voices will be heard, listened to, and taken into consideration in the halls of power. This means that those in power must be accountable, and that the institutions they serve in will function in predictable, rule-based ways. Which is why it is so damaging when government acts in ways that diminish trust.

If you feel that government is just helping corporations and rich people, you lose confidence in the system. If people see a government that tolerates a high degree of economic inequality in the country, and great disparities in opportunities between rich people and middle-class people, they no longer trust that system.

Yet for representative democracy to work, public officials, politicians and policy makers have to have a sufficient level of support from ordinary people. You and I have to believe that our representatives will in fact level with us rather than present half-truths and distortions, and will act in our interests. Similarly, for government to have any standing in our lives, we have to have confidence in the experts, technocrats, and frontline staff who make the sys-

This means, in turn, that government has to be able to deliver the goods, the services, the protections that people expect. So the performance of the government — its efficiency and effectiveness — is fundamental to the success of representative democracy.

The same with our elected representatives. If they can't show they're able to function according to the rules, traditions and norms that we expect, if they are unable to demonstrate durability in the face of adversity, if they are unable to acknowledge the facts, if they cannot rise above division and gridlock and negotiate to get things done, then we lose faith. Which may explain why so many have become suspicious not just of our government, but of one another.

Ironically, one cure for this lack of trust is more exposure to the system, through engagement and participation in politics or in civic life. If people are regular participants in political parties, clubs, organizations, or associations of all kinds in their communities, they are much more likely to carry some level of trust in government. And to the extent they don't do these things, public life seems more distant and less trustworthy.

There is no doubt that my colleague was right. If the various levels of government don't enjoy the trust of the people, if within each level the participants don't trust one another, then representative democracy doesn't work.

Which is why the low levels of trust we see in the United States today are so worrisome. How far down this road can we go before we lose the ability to function effectively as a democracy?

What does a paraprofessional educator do?

By Steve Harter Siblev East Middle School/-High School Principal

What does a paraprofessional educator do? The paraprofessionals that we employee at Sibley East are essential to what happens in the school every day. Without paraprofessionals we would not be able to provide the quality education that all of our students truly deserve. The paraprofessional job description (which is constantly changing) includes assisting teachers in the classroom, supervising students outside of the classroom, and providing support for many students who simply need that little extra help and encouragement in order to be academically successful. Some paraprofessionals work directly with students, in which case they may listen to students practice reading aloud, help students understand and complete their assignments, or assist students with special needs. Other paras are assigned to work with smaller groups of students. Sometimes these smaller groups are in a class together or in a "pull-out" group that learns on its own. Some paras work primarily or exclusively with students who have special educational needs. Their duties vary according to the needs of the student, and may include behavioral management, academic assistance or even physical care for students who are unable to care for themselves (such as feeding, lifting or moving). Regardless of what a paraprofessional is assigned to do, they play an extremely important role in the school and in the lives of the children that they are assist-

If you would like to be a paraprofessional and do something that really helps students, please consider being a paraprofessional at Sibley East. If you are interested please contact either of the school offices.

Last Sunday, Nov. 11, occurred the Golden wedding celebration of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Nimtz, Sr., highly respected and pioneers of Arlington township. They are still living on the old homestead which they settled on a half century ago. The farm is now conducted by their son, Carl, with whom they reside. Mr Nimtz has passed his 71 milestone, while his estimable spouse is 66, both being in fairly good health dispite their advanced age.

We are having beautiful fall weather-the kind that saves fuel, especially in view of the impending strike at the coal mines. The recent rains put some of our farmers in a jam with the corn harvest. Some of the fields are so soft that tractors and pickers can't operate.

FSA Matters

By Dan Mahoney, CED FSA Encourages Farmers and Ranchers to Vote in County Committee Elections

The 2018 Farm Service Agency County Committee Elections is beginning on Nov. 5, when ballots were mailed to eligible voters. The deadline to return the ballots to local FSA offices is Dec. 3, 2018.

County committee members are an important component of the operations of FSA and provide a link between the agricultural community and USDA. Farmers and ranchers elected to county committees help deliver FSA programs at the local level, applying their knowledge and judgment to make decisions on commodity price support programs; conservation programs; incentive indemnity and disaster programs for some commodities; emergency programs and eligibility. FSA committees operate within official regulations designed to carry out

To be an eligible voter, farmers and ranchers must participate or cooperate in an FSA program. A person who is not of legal voting age, but supervises and conducts the farming operations of an entire farm may also be eligible

Eligible voters in local administrative area LAA 2, who do not receive a ballot can obtain one from their local USDA Service Center. Dec. 3, 2018, is the last day for voters to submit ballots in person to local USDA Service Centers. Ballots returned by mail must also be postmarked no later than Dec. 3. Newly elected committee members will take office Jan. 1, 2019.

The COC representative for LAA 2 is up for election this year. LAA 2 is comprised of New Auburn, Dryden, Arlington, Alfsborg, Sibley and Kelso Townships

The candidate in this year's election is:

Kelli Wentzlaff resides in

LAA 2, and currently produces corn and soybeans. In addition, the Wentzlaff family has raised cattle and produces maple syrup. Kelli Wentzlaff has been involved in agriculture for 23 years. Kelli Wentzlaff is a member of the Corn Growers Association. Kelli Wentzlaff is willing to serve if elected.

As a reminder all ballots must be signed using the proper signature authority. If you are signing for a Trust, Corporation, or any type of entity please ensure that your title or signature authority is indicated as instructed on the ballot. When counting ballots only the correctly completed ballots can be counted. If you are taking the time to vote for your entity it is important that your vote will be counted.

More information on county committees, such as the new 2018 fact sheet, can be found on the FSA website at www.fsa.usda.gov/elections or at a local USDA Service Center.
